What does it mean to grow up, develop and thrive in the age of AI?

Placing children and young people at the centre of the global conversation.

Artificial intelligence is increasingly shaping the world in which younger generations grow, learn, communicate and build relationships. As these technologies become more present in everyday life, their impact on mental health, wellbeing and human development must be carefully understood.

Join Fondazione Child for a high-level conversation bringing together experts from international institutions, academia, civil society and the technology sector. Together, we will explore how innovation can support children's wellbeing while keeping children and young people at the centre of the debate.
